SCHUTT SHOULDER PAD FITTING INSTRUCTIONS

SHOULDER PAD RICHTIG ANPASSEN

SCHUTT SHOULDER PADS

PLEASE NOTE:

This fitting guide should be used as a standard guide only. Players with different body builds and muscle structure may require special attention. Each shoulder pad varies depending on what brand you choose. You can further protect yourself with a variety of padding, some designed more for specific positions and some to help injured players to protect sensitive areas. Contact your local Schutt Supplier.

STEP 1

To determine the size of the shoulder pad that best suits you, stand up straight with your arms at your side, and follow these instructions as close as possible.

Measure the chest size of the athlete by measuring chest circumference just below the armpits.

STEP 2

Measure shoulder width from tip of the shoulder AC joint (humerus) to the AC joint (humerus) on the back.

STEP 3

Be sure that the shoulder joint is covered by the top portion of arch area and deltoid padding which must extend to the outside edge of shoulder.

The shoulder pad should cover the sternum. Secure strap/beltsystem should not squeeze into your armpit.

STEP 4

Be sure that scapula (shoulder blade) adequately covered by arch and lateral extension of padding. Arch padding should extend below base of scapula.

STEP 5

Once everything is secure, ensure the shoulder pads fit properly. The padding shouldn't be pinching your collar, and should sit comfortably on your shoulders. Typically, about 1" of padding should extend from your shoulders.
